

ROGER JENSEN/THE OREGONIAN

Rounding out the Round | The walls for a 400-space parking garage rise Thursday at the Round at Beaverton Central. The building, between the Coldwell Banker and 24-Hour Fitness buildings, is expected to be completed in December. After the garage is finished, developers plan to start a new office building between the fitness club and the MAX light-rail line, says Cherie Henry, property manager for Dorn-Platz Properties of California. When the Round is completed within three years, it will have eight buildings west of Southwest Hall Boulevard.